POSTUM

Has brought them Sound Sleep, Steady Nerves, Good Digestion, Clear Brains, Strong Hearts, Comfort and Health.

Why?

Coffee certainly does destroy the soft gray filling in the nerve centers and brain. When that goes far enough you feel it—Nervousness, heart trouble, sleeplessness, headache, indigestion, or some form of ailment caused by a shattered nervous system.

Keep at the coffee until you prove it. Then if you value comfort from sturdy health on properly built nerve cells quit coffee and take on POSTUM.

Then you quickly begin the rebuilding and no one need tell you.

YOU KNOW IT.

The elements are in Postum that Nature

Granted Divorce

Emme McGowan was granted a divorce by Judge Armstrong of the district court Wednesday from J. J. McGowan, on the ground of failure to support. They were married in De Lamar, Nov. 20, 1898, and Mrs. McGowan claimed that her husband had failed to support her for four years preceding the divorce.

Dope From the Police Court

Judge Bowman, as well as all of the officials connected with the police court, lost no time in clearing the docket Wednesday afternoon. The feature of the legal system being the calling of the names of all persons charged with vagrancy and causing those who responded to stand and plead. Ten charged with vagrancy admitted that they would like to get out of the city and were given hours. Ten charged with drunkenness told various tales of woe to the court and were told to go home and not to let the same thing happen again.

George Campbell, charged with petit larceny during the hearing of his case set for November 25. His bail was fixed at $50, in default of which he was remanded to the custody of the chief of police. It is alleged in the complaint that he stole a pair of shoes belonging to P. Solomon.

Henry Tremayne, charged with petit larceny, pleaded guilty and told the court that he was ready for trial. He had been arrested in the company of George Campbell, and it is alleged in the complaint that he stole a box of cigars, valued at $1, from a store on West Second South street. Under the questioning of Assistant City Attorney Rogers, it developed that Tremayne is a peddler and has three small children, the support of whom depends on his earnings. At this point in the man's story, Judge Bowman took a hand in the examination, and made it a point to determine just how much Tremayne gave toward the support of the children and where they are living. Tremayne testified that the children are in the care of the mother, and also testified that the mother had secured a divorce from him and alimony to the extent of $25 a month, which went to the support of the little ones. Mr. Rogers then interposed, and said that the man was an offender, but as this could not be proven, Judge Bowman said that he did not care for the suffering of the man, but that he cared for the suffering of the children. He then ordered that the man be put down in the case, and wishing to get further information on the case he continued it until Thursday afternoon.

Charles Renick, charged with disturbing the peace, was fined $25. Charles had been in the court a number of times, and the court said a fine of $25 might keep him away in the future.

James Marsh was bound over to the district court to stand trial for assault, with intent to murder Mrs. Malinda Newell. The chief witness for the state was Ida Newell, ten years of age. At the conclusion of the preliminary hearing the child testified that she was sleeping with her mother on the morning of September 28, and that on that morning Marsh entered the bedroom and, after the refusal of the mother to allow him to enter, he seized Mrs. Newell by the throat, beat and tried to kill her. The child then told the court that she tried to call the police over the phone, when Marsh also threatened to kill her. Two boys, ten and twelve years old, respectively, who were sleeping in an adjoining room the morning of the assault, told the court a story similar to the one told by the little girl. Patrolman Woods testified that he had arrested Marsh the morning of the assault, and that he had found the man hiding in the cellar. On the way to the station the policeman said that Marsh had threatened to kill the woman and himself in the event that she refused to marry him.

Warlock Amott, sixteen years of age, who lives at Provo, pleaded not guilty to the charge of obtaining money by false pretenses. It is alleged in the complaint that young Amott passed a check from clearing house No. 4 on Morris Levy, a merchant, ordering the Continental National bank to pay to Amott $5, and that the instrument carried the forged signature of L. P. Amott. The youth denied forging the check, but admitted to pass it. He claimed that the check was forged by a young man whose name is in the case, but that he did not know the man. His preliminary hearing was set for December 15, and his bond fixed at $200.

CONGREGATIONALISTS OF POCATELLO HEAR GOOD SERMONS BY LAYMEN

BY C. E. ARNEY.

Special to The Tribune.

POCATELLO, Nov. 17.—The Congregational church of this city has adopted a new and rather novel plan for Sunday evening service, placing the program under the charge of the brotherhood and having a series of addresses by laymen. Last Sunday evening Henry W. Lockhart addressed the audience. Next Sunday evening A. B. Richardson, secretary of the Y. M. C. A., will speak, and he will be followed by Frank P. Holt and then Superintendent Siders will deliver an address.

Judge P. W. Standford presided at the Sunday night service, and in introducing Mr. Lockhart, who had been assigned the topic of "The Church and Municipal Life," referred to his recent connection with state politics, and complimented him on having always evidenced the courage of his convictions in all public questions.

Mr. Lockhart is a lawyer and was chairman of the Democratic state committee during the years 1907-8. In his address last Sunday evening, Mr. Lockhart said, in part:

"From my investigation, the law is well settled by an almost unbroken line of court decisions, that it is legal to absolutely abolish the liquor traffic, or regulate the sale thereof, and that the responsibility therefor is simply a matter for the people to decide."

After analyzing the composition of the church and of a municipality, Mr. Lockhart quoted the Constitution of the nation pertaining to religion and its tolerance, and then cited the law of New York state on the subject, as containing a commentary as sound as can be given on religious freedom and restrictions, which is in the following language:

"The free exercise and enjoyment of religious profession and worship, without discrimination or preference, shall never be allowed in this state to all mankind, and no person shall be rendered incompetent to be a witness on account of his opinions on matters of religious belief, but the liberty of conscience hereby secured, shall not be so construed as to excuse acts of licentiousness or justify practices inconsistent with the peace or safety of the state."

He then deduced as follows: "A church promulgating doctrines of responsibility to Jesus Christ for all our actions; a future state of reward and punishment; is the greatest constructive force in human life. The pretense of religion and the pretense of sanctity and humility have been employed throughout the world as the most direct means of gaining power and influence."

The speaker then made the keen analysis of man's nature being a worshipful nature, and gave a brief history of the pagan countries, where the Sabbath and God were unknown, yet men would prostrate themselves before the sun and moon, and called attention to early traditions of the French to the end that when the Sabbath was abolished the people resorted to a form of worship to the gods of Reason; as a result of which man was degraded to the plane of the brute. "The cheering, comforting prospects of immortality were transformed into the shades of an endless night and anxiety reigned supreme. What happened in France would happen in this country; history would repeat itself," said the speaker.

He paid a glowing tribute to Mayor "Golden Rule" Bunker, who took as his motto in life "Do unto others as you would have them do unto you," and would have them stand with him in the people of Toledo, of Ohio, and of the nation.

During Mr. Lockhart's address, respect to the ministers of this age, whose influence was always to be found on the moral side of every question of importance to the municipal life of the community.

The discovery that Bunker L. French has a spinal vertebra in excess of the human body has been a minor quantity in the former health congressman which has from time to time been lamented by his constituency.

French has always lacked in courage to express his convictions. He was a man who knew his best credit him with a mind which thinks right on public questions. But like many other public men who reflect themselves on the long-suffering public, he is devoid of the courage of his convictions.

An observation was made here yesterday by one who knows the ex-congressman, which is applicable. "If the defeat of French for re-election a year since gave to him the courage he exhibits in his interview, his job was a good one, for no one ever heard of his showing any 'guts' before," said the observer.

French served the people of Idaho three times as their congressman and was defeated in state convention last year by Thomas R. Homer of St. Anthony. During his entire term of service, Cannon was speaker of the national house, and French supported him. During this period life was as dramatic and his views as obvious as they are now, but French had no occasion for denouncing him.

Congressman Homer supported Cannon, as did his complaining predecessor, and defended himself for so doing—probably to his political detriment—since his return to Idaho. But in his defense there is a relief from the ordinary passive, noncommittal habit of too many men in public life, of which ex-Congressman French was a striking example.

In his castigation of Speaker Cannon, French voices the sentiments of the people, but the general impression prevails in this section of the state, that his attitude is the direct result of his ambition to defeat Homer in the primaries next August, and those who know him best are pleased to congratulate him in his recent discovery of a backbone.

Too many Idaho politicians are of the noncommittal stripe of which ex-Senator Allison of Iowa was a shining example. Senator Tillman recently styled him, "Soft-Paddle William." "Construct a plan with a leechboard extending from Denver to Seattle," said Tillman, "and Allison will step on every ray, the entire distance, and never sound a note."

Two of Allison's constituents about to drive him ten miles through the country of Iowa made a wager, the issue being the commitment of Allison to some certain positive statement during the drive.

As they neared their destination, previous efforts having failed, the anxious constituent walked at his friend and pointing to a pasture field along the roadside, remarked:

"Senator, those sheep are newly shorned, to which the 'fox' senator referred to, 'It appears so from this side.'"

Flax Growers to Meet.

A mass meeting of citizens interested in the flax growing industry will be held at the Pocatello hotel on Wednesday at the fifteenth ward meeting house, First South and Eighth West streets. Prominent speakers will be present, including, especially on the subject of the flax industry in this state, with the object in view of building up the flax industry of this state, and of other products to be brought forth from the growing of the flax.

Work Well Along.

City Engineer Chamberlain announces that the work on the North Temple street aqueduct is progressing very well, and that the waterway is completed to Third West street. There are yet about 900 feet of the aqueduct to be built before it is completed and it is expected that it will be done before winter sets in.

Walton Resigns.

Dyke Walton, who has been employed as clerk in the office of the state board of land commissioners for several years, tendered his resignation Tuesday morning, November 15. Walton has had charge of the making of the maps and plats in the office and it is the intention to let before the place will be filled by the board for some time to come.
